Change 1 to Field Manual (FM) 3-0 incorporates lessons learned from continuing operations and maturing discussions with regard to U.S. Army doctrine. Key changes include replacing “command and control” with “mission command” as an activity and warfighting function and replacing the five Army information tasks with “inform and influence” and “cyber/electromagnetic” activities. The manual also contains several other changes:

- Hybrid threats are addressed.
- Security force assistance is described under stability operations.
- Chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and high-yield explosives consequence management is an additional civil support task.
- Design is included in Chapter 7.

FM 7-0, Training Units and Developing Leaders for Full Spectrum Operations
(Published 23 February 2011)

---

The recently updated FM 7-0 is the U.S. Army’s keystone doctrine for training units and developing leaders for full spectrum operations on a rotational cycle using the Army force generation process.

The electronic version of the new FM, which is less than one-third as lengthy as the 2008 version of the FM, is best viewed on the Army Training Network at <https://atn.army.mil>. The online FM contains links to documents, examples, videos, best practices, and other resources. Now, for the first time, FM 7-0—

- Incorporates leader development as part of unit training.
- Replaces core and directed mission-essential task lists with full spectrum operations mission-essential task lists.
- Focuses on a modular, brigadecentric force in the Army force generation process.
- Introduces the importance of full spectrum operations training against complex hybrid threats.
- Makes training management an intellectual, rather than lockstep, process.
